Have you been asking

*What would give my life
more meaning?*

Can I still pursue significance even though I have not accumulated enough to retire?

What is God's plan for the second half of my life?

If so, you are not alone.

Many highly successful people reach a point in life where the pursuit of success alone is no longer enough. They want their lives in the second half to count for something significant, something bigger than themselves. So how do you think that through?

When you reach the Halftime of life you don't have to quit your job or sell your company to pursue your desire for significance. Halftime is a great time to realign your work with your passions and strengths.

The Halftime Summit is designed to help you clarify your core abilities and passions through group interaction, personal reflection and planning. It will help you discover creative ways to channel your passions and talents toward Kingdom-significance. The peer interactions, the tools and exercises will give you new-found purpose, clarity, and passion for your second
